#WDDW World Day for Decent Work: 2021

This World Day for Decent Work is about one thing: jobs – Just Jobs.

The COVID-19 pandemic has devasted employment. Now is the time for all governments to develop jobs plans in consultation with trade unions. Social dialogue must take place in the design and implementation of jobs plans.

How many jobs?

The ITUC is demanding a plan to create 575 million jobs and the formalisation of at least half of informal jobs by 2030. This will take the world to full employment. Every country must play its part.

What kind of jobs?

- Climate-friendly jobs – to stabilise the planet and deliver a zero-carbon economy.
- Inclusive jobs – because over 200 million jobs were lost to Covid-19 and the vast majority were lost by women.
- Jobs with rights, including maximum working hours, living minimum wages and health and safety at work, regardless of the employment arrangements.
- Jobs in care and infrastructure – because the recovery from the pandemic must be resilient to deal with future shocks and other threats.

Why jobs?

Governments must recommit to full employment because this provides the basis for economic security and social justice.

What makes a good jobs plan?

See the ITUC campaign brief for suggestions about what should and should not be a jobs plan.

“The global labour market is broken. Governments have failed to regulate work and lost sight of the objective of full employment. Work is even more precarious than it was before the pandemic hit, and this requires the rules to change so that people are protected from growing exploitation and rampant insecurity,” said Sharan Burrow, ITUC General Secretary.
